For ages Australia lay in its original condition, untrodden by the feet of white men. In 1770, Captain Cook, immortalized as a minister of civilization, observed on the eastern coast a harbor whose shores me South, and during my sojorn there I had occasion to pass through the (so called) 'Turpentine District' And silent and mute, swing on you willow tree. called the place Botany Bay. To him it was endeared by associations of delight; to us its name is repuling a stagecoach that was moving along at the rate of sive, as attached to a sink of crime. The American colonies, revolting under oppression, proclaimed their independence, and the mother State, having cast from her bosom the promising child she had nurtured, went forth again to seek a new home for her offspring in the waste places of the world. An Ausquiet sort of expression. The younger a man of iwentytrilian settlement was projected, for the reception five or thirty, was tall, slim, and rather delicate lookof convicted criminals. An expedition was at once ing, with a jolly, devil may care style, and a peculiar equipped. It consisted of two vessels of war, six short, jerked-out sort of speech, which reminded one transports, and three store ships. On board were of the celebrated Alfred Jingle, Esq, of Pickwickian 506 male and 192 female convicts; 160 marines with their officers, and the usual complement of crews .-Provisions, tools, implements, and materials were provided. Burdened with its load of crime, the squadron spread sail for the "Unknown Southern Land." The expedition reached the shores of Australia in January, 1788. A sailor, named Jackson, discovered were manned, and the people stepped out of them, literally under the shadow of a forest. All was wild and silent. The tents were pitched, an encampment was arranged, the axe and spade were set to work, and the English name and nation were for the first time established in Australia. On that distant shore, then clothed with dreary wounds, there now stands the capital of a great colony, a prosperous city, embelished with beautiful structures, populous and rich, and stamped with the impress of civilization. rapid growth of its importance, every other in the

But New South Wales did not spring-it struggled into prosperity. The early years of its existence were full of trouble. The qualities of its soil were not understood; the crops were scanty; the convicts were idle and greedy; the military were insubordinate; supplies arrived at different intervals, and the hopes of the settlers were depressed by the dread of famine. Searcity and disease made havoc among them, and before four months had passed, a gallows cast its ill-omened shadow over the birth place of Sydney. A youth, only seventeen years of age, stained the infant city with crime, and was cut off "ir the land of promise" by the hands of the hangman. Another miserable creature, during a time of want, swallowed eight pounds of flour cakes at a meal, and died of surfeit. Others, sharing the ignorance of more educated classes in England, conceived the idea of escape by travelling overland to China. They started on their journey and were never more heard of .-Probably they were killed by the natives; but possibly, also, some became domesticated among them, and relapsed into the savage state of life. Recently, it was well known, some sailors did do so, on the coast above Moreton Bay. The colony struggled for existence during many years. A settlement was founded at Norfolk Island, to relieve Sydney from some of its convict population; but, in spite of every exertion, the century drew to fortune, many spent their time in an unprofitable search for gold. One of the convicts, noticing the hills. The fraud was detected; instead of the reward he looked for, the former received a flogging, and, afterwards committing a more serious offence, ended his life on the scaffold. A contrast between the condition of the colony during the first years of its establishment with its present state, displays a remarkable result. Four years after the landing at Port Jackson, the public stock consisted of one aged stallion, two colts, sixteen cows, two calves, one ram, fifty ewes, six lambs, one boar, fourteen sows, and twenty-two pigs. At Paramatta, near Sydney, there were three hundred acres cultivated with indian corn, forty-four with wheat, six with barley, one with oats, four with vines, and eighty-six laid out in gardens, besides seventeen belonging to the soldiers.

458 acres tilled. Before 1836, about 17,000,000 lbs. of wool had been shipped from New South Wales, which now contains about 7,000,000 sheep, more than 100,000 horses, nearly 1,500,000 cattle, and pigs beyond calculation. About 33,000 sheep, and 10,000 cattle are slaughtered annually, producing more than 20,000 cwt. of tallow. 180,000 acres are under cultivation; they produce nearly 2,000,000 toes, tobocco and hay. From such small beginnings has New South Wales risen to this position. A shetch of its artest and they reached the almost incredible number of 1,720, and they now estimate the number at not less than 2000.—Newark Advertiser. 5th. bushels of grain, and more than 60,000 tons of potasketch of its extent and resources may explain the rapid progress .-- Sharpe's Magazine.

A Hero. "There is an endearing tenderness," says Washington Irving, "in the love of a mother for her son, that transcends all other affections of the heart." --We have just heard a touching illustration of the fact that the love of a son for his mother may also transcend and swallow up all other affections, at a moment, too, when he might well be pardoned for remembering only his own great trials.

Some two years ago, a young man, belonging to Philadelphia, was returning by railroad to that city, from the town of Reading, Pennsylvania. By an accident which happened to the train as it was approaching town, and while he was standing upon dye tub close by, filled with a blue liquid! the platform, he was thrown off, and fell partly under the wheel of the succeeding car, and his right arm, "marrow, bone and all," was crushed to a jelly, and dropped uselessly at his side. "My surgical-table," said the doctor, "is below."
"Gan, it not be done without that?" asked the sufferer. "I cannot be tied-I cannot be held. Amputate my arm here, doctor," he continued, holding out his dangling limb over the back of the sofa .interfere with your operations."

The limb was bared : two attendants, medical students in the house, were summoned; the arm was taken off above the elbow, while the patient sat as he had requested, attering no groan, nor speaking a single word, while the operation was being performed. PATENT "YOKE SEAM" SHIRTS. N order that our customers and the public generally may rightly understand what is meant by "Yoke Seam," we will here explan :- Instead of the body of the Shirt being brought up and gathered and fastened to the neck band, an additional piece of linen is cut to fit the shoulders and back, the same as a coat, giving ease and comfort to the wearer: at the same time so regulating the bosom and coffar as to make one of the best fitting garments worn. The "Yoke Seam" having been patented, we wish it dis-tinetly understood that we are the only persons authorized to sell these Shirts in North Carolina. Call at SCOTT & BALDWIN'S Clothing and Furnishing Department, Market-st.
